To the Family of Aidien,

As a wrap up to the Bias Busting Exhibit, please find the enclosed self-evaluation. We have also added our comments and marks in green pen. The multi-dimensional nature of the project demanded a lot of the students and, at times, proved to be challenging. We feel the event was a success. The students learned about their topics and about themselves. The evaluation serves as a reminder of how reflection helps us note the gains made and identify future ways to improve.

Aidien was quick to identify her project, develop a plan and to work towards completion. She created a Bias Busting Bookshelf for the school. Thanks to her hard work, we now have a collection of books from diverse authors! For this project, Aidien worked with two students who frequently need a high-level of extra support. She did an exceptional job directing each student to contribute in a way that fit their strength. We appreciate Aidien's kindness and leadership; she makes sure that each student feels welcome and included. For the next exhibition, we would push Aidien to look for ways to make her project more complex and to incorporate feedback from critiques.

Cordially,
